

If you receive an e-mail that appears to be from a Credit Union organization such as the Texas Credit Union League (TCUL) or Credit Union National Association (CUNA) and it instructs you to go online to provide or "verify" financial or sensitive personal information, don't believe it: these organizations will never send you an e-mail asking for your credit- or debit-card, credit union or bank account information, Social Security number, login information (such as a PIN) or similarly sensitive data.

TCUL and CUNA's name, logo, and other graphics have been used fraudulently in phishing e-mails aimed at tricking people into providing sensitive financial and personal data on replicated Web sites. Giving these phishers your account and other sensitive information may expose you to identity theft and other types of fraud.
